

CALL FOR PAPERS

International Conference on Hemispheric and US Studies 2019

The Center for Hemispheric and US Studies (CEHSEU) and the Nuestra América Chair of the University of Havana invite you to participate in its International Conference on Hemispheric and US Studies 2019. It will be held on June 12-14, 2019 at the Varona Building of the main campus of the University of Havana.

Papers must reflect phenomena related to the US dynamics, including elements of the political system, the decision-making process of its international policy, International economic relations, electoral situation, socio-demographic structure, ideology, among others.

Papers focused on hemispheric processes such as conflicts, integration, regional or continental security must include the role the United States has played in their development (bilateral relations with specific countries, its hemispheric or global policy, among others).

Thus, the main topics are the following:

- 1.- The United States of America: its socioeconomic evolution and domestic political processes in the XXI Century.
- 2.- The United States of America: changes and continuities in the elements and factors impacting its foreign policy.
- 3.- Bilateral Relations between Cuba and the United States of America before and after December 17, 2014.
- 4.-Latin America and the Caribbean: sociopolitical processes and their relations with the United States of America.

Those interested should send a proposal to the Organizing Commission with the following data: Full name, institution, telephone number, email, title of the paper and abstract of no more than 250 words. The paper submission deadline is 5:00 pm Eastern Standard Time, May 1st, 2019.
